

WALKER VS HEALDINTRODUCTION

UPDATED: 20 FEB 2020

ABOUT THIS WEBSITE

This website contains the Plaintiff's best effort to organize the details of the case into a form that an attorney can use to formulate case documents. The Plaintiff believes that it was an appropriate effort considering that he would be communicating with counsel from halfway around the world, and because the case has significant complexity that needed to be conceptually organized (e.g., claims, frauds, injuries, damages, etc.) and also structured into appropriate levels of detail.

The conceptual organization is represented by a set of separate areas of the lawsuit (e.g., Overview, Claims, Damages, etc.) containing links to individual webpages (see blue Navbar on the left), each covering a particular aspect in the lawsuit.

Each webpage will internally provide major headings that frequently contain clickable arrows (shown as ►►►) for opening up that heading to access details and related evidence. These arrow controls make it easy to view a topic at a high conceptual level, or alternatively at an expanded level with greater detail.

ABSTRACT

This lawsuit is about a claim that the Plaintiff, Jonathan Walker, makes against the Defendant, Wendy Heald, his ex-wife.

The claim has to do with a deception related to the Plaintiff's child-support debt to the Defendant that played out for over a decade.

LAWSUIT PLAN

The Plaintiff's plan is to prosecute this lawsuit against the Defendant and then proceed to a second lawsuit against other parties related to additional frauds.

Assuming that this lawsuit is legally viable, there may be some room for an out-of-court settlement, which would allow effort to be immediately redirected to the second lawsuit.

However on the other hand, it may be beneficial to drive this lawsuit to a court judgement, because there is the strong possibility of some parts of the judgement would be relevant to the second lawsuit.

Anyway as a first step, the Plaintiff would like to proceed to an initial evaluation of the case made from this website and dialogue with the Plaintiff.

... to continue, click on the ~~Summary~~ link in the blue Navbar...